

The other Machu Picchu

Most people think to visit only Machu Picchu but did you consider discovering Choquequirao? a little visited place but just as beautiful as Machu Picchu.

Choquequirao is an archaeological site, located in the mountains and matches in size and majesty with Machu Picchu and also shares similarities in architecture and planning.

Unlike the most popular Inca attraction in the country, you cannot travel here by tourist bus and if you want to discover Choquequirao Trek 4 Days, you must travel adventurous trails through the mountains.

Throughout the trail you will embrace sharp cliffs that rise above the roaring Apurimac River just as you will be able to see the snowy point of Salkantay on the blue horizon.

Choquequirao Trek 4 Days was a city of spiritual retreat; place of pilgrimages and ceremonies in which leaders of the Inca Empire participated Choquequirao Trek 4 Days has aqueducts, temples, houses, mausoleums but what you cannot miss is visiting its agricultural terraces where you can see the llamas that are part of the white terraces.

On these terraces that extend the entire length of the mountainside, the Incas cultivated corn and coca to support a population that was probably larger than those that lived in Machu Picchu.
